REFERENCE

COLLECTIONS

EXPLANATIONS

The title of a book given in brackets indicates that it is the original source of publication of a story which is indexed from a collection—the author's complete works not being indexed.

The order of references as given under the author entry is as follows:

1. Author's collected works
2. Author's separate works
3. Composite collections
4. Magazines

The list of books in Appendix A should be consulted to ascertain what editions have been indexed. Different editions of an author's works bearing the same title do not always contain the same stories.

In foreign names variations in spelling often occur. The Library of Congress spelling has been followed wherever possible but under "Contents" entries in "Appendix A. Collections," the spelling given by the editors is retained. This should cause no confusion as cross references are made from the variants in the main index.

The Supplement contains not only stories written since the publication of the Second Edition of the Index to Short Stories but many stories by older authors not previously indexed. Entries for the earlier editions are not repeated in the Supplement, but when titles of stories indexed in the earlier editions reappear in new collections these are entered thus giving additional sources of information as to where the stories may be found. It will therefore be necessary to use both the Second Edition and the Supplement in order to locate all reprints of the stories.

PREFACE

It goes without saying that every bibliography is out of date as soon as it is sent to the press, for time and the making of books never stop. Since the appearance of the second edition of the INDEX TO SHORT STORIES in 1923, many new volumes of stories by authors listed in the earlier editions and many collections by authors not previously indexed, have been issued; it has therefore been decided to publish a supplementary volume.

The arrangement followed in the Supplement is practically the same as that in the earlier editions of the Index; namely, that of listing in one alphabet the author and title entries of the stories,—full information as to where the stories may be found being given under the author entry. A slight change in the arrangement of the subject entries has been made; the subjects—Christmas Stories, Ghost Stories—whatever they may be, are now printed in bold-faced type; under the subject headings the authors' names and the titles of the stories are indented. Heretofore some users of the Index seem not to have realized that there are many subject entries in the previous editions; e.g. under "Ghost" not the stories only whose titles begin with "Ghost" were entered but also transposed titles with an initial "Ghost" in brackets were listed. It is hoped that the new arrangement may prove helpful. While no effort has been made to classify all stories by subjects, the number of subject entries has been greatly increased.

References which appear in the Second Edition have not been repeated but old titles which reappear in later collections are listed; it will therefore be necessary to use both the Second Edition and the Supplement to be sure that all available sources are found. Some collections of a date early enough to have been included in the Second Edition have been added here either because of unintentional omission from the former work or because some reason has developed for the inclusion of authors not previously indexed. The editor frequently comes across stories printed in obscure places which have not been gathered into collected volumes and which do not appear in any periodical indexes; when these are discovered a note is always made to include them in a future edition. For example, a much amplified list of Anthony Trollope's short stories appears in the Supplement; this was made possible by a recent publication of a Trollope bibliography which revealed the whereabouts of many forgotten tales. From time to time letters are received from librarians who have failed to find stories they have needed in the Index; while all such suggestions cannot be complied with, the editor is glad to receive them and has, in several instances, indexed the desired works in the Supplement.

In the preparation of the Supplement, the editor has been acutely conscious that her choice of authors to be included is less discriminating than in the earlier editions; whether this will be considered an improvement or a fall from grace she cannot tell, but it is an inevitable result of the constantly increasing number of short story writers, whose work is found acceptable by publishers and editors in spite of a total lack of artistic quality. These are the stories which people read and which they desire to find in the Index. The editor has therefore given up—if she had ever assumed it—the role of censor and offers her work as a tool to meet a demand; it is not for her to say what her clientele shall read but to provide the means for supplying the information it seeks.

INDEX TO SHORT STORIES

In the Appendix there has been added under "Collections" the complete table of contents of the volumes indexed; this was done in compliance with definite requests for this information.

There have been indexed in the Supplement 11,092 stories by 1,031 authors; the latter represent thirty-six nationalities.
